DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. Applicant is reminded of the proper language and format for an abstract of the disclosure.

The abstract should be in narrative form and generally limited to a single paragraph on a separate sheet within the range of 50 to 150 words. It is important that the abstract not exceed 150 words in length since the space provided for the abstract on the computer tape used by the printer is limited. The form and legal phraseology often used in patent claims, such as "means" and "said," should be avoided. The abstract should describe the disclosure sufficiently to assist readers in deciding whether there is a need for consulting the full patent text for details.

The language should be clear and concise and should not repeat information given in the title. It should avoid using phrases which can be implied, such as, "The disclosure concerns," "The disclosure defined by this invention," "The disclosure describes," etc.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 1-5 and 9-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Arnold et al. (US006167449A).
4. With regard to claims 1, 9-10, 13 and 19, Arnold reference discloses,
  - capturing a search (queries) for invocable logic units (registered services) issued from the second system (interface 120); (Arnold, col.3, lines 55-58; Arnold teaches of a client computer querying the servers for externally accessible registered services)
  - returning a list of one or more externally invocable logic units of the first system as a result for the captured search; (Arnold, col.4, lines 10-16; Arnold teaches of a client computer receiving the result from querying the servers for externally accessible registered services)
  - capturing a command to invoke a logic unit issued from the second system; and (Arnold, col.4, lines 22-25; Arnold teaches of launching specialized application for externally accessing the registered services)
  - if the logic unit identified in the captured command is a listed logic unit, causing the first system to invoke the identified logic unit, receiving the results of the invocation of the identified logic unit from the first system, and returning the results to the second system. (Arnold, col.4, lines 22-25; Arnold teaches of launching specialized application for externally accessing the registered services)
5. With regard to claims 2, 11-12 and 17-18, Arnold reference discloses,
  - wherein the list identifies the externally invocable logic units of the first system that match a search pattern. (Arnold, col.4, lines 10-16; col.7, lines 7-11; Arnold teaches of a client computer receiving the result from querying the servers for externally accessible registered services)

6. With regard to claims 3-5 and 14-16, Arnold reference discloses,
- wherein causing the first system to invoke the identified logic unit comprises:
    - extracting data associated with the identified logic unit from the second system; providing the extracted data to the first system; and instructing the first system to invoke the identified logic unit. (Arnold, col.12, lines 31-35; Arnold teaches of converting the resulted data from one format into another format)
  - wherein providing the extracted data comprises:
    - converting the extracted data from a format associated with the second system to a format associated with the first system; and passing the converted data to the first system. (Arnold, col.12, lines 31-35; Arnold teaches of converting the resulted data from one format into another format)
7. Claims 6-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Arnold et al. (US006167449A).
8. With regard to claims 6-8, Arnold reference discloses,
- capturing, at the third system (network of servers 122), a search (queries) for invocable logic units (registered services) issued from the second system (NSL Manager 114 and plug-ins 118); (Arnold, col.3, lines 55-58; col.5, lines 12-60; fig.2; Arnold teaches of an application, which may runs from a client computer, querying the NSL Manager, which may run on a separate machine suggested by the dashed box, for externally accessible registered services from the network servers)

- returning, from the third system to the second system, a list of one or more externally invocable logic units of the first system as a result for the captured search; (Arnold, col.4, lines 10-16; col.5, lines 12-60; fig.2; Arnold teaches of a client computer receiving the result from querying the servers for externally accessible registered services)
- capturing, at the third system, a command to invoke a logic unit issued from the second system; and (Arnold, col.4, lines 22-25; col.5, lines 12-60; fig.2; Arnold teaches of launching specialized application for externally accessing the registered services)
- if the logic unit identified in the captured command is a listed logic unit, causing, from the third system, the first system to invoke the identified logic unit, receiving, at the third system, the results of the invocation of the identified logic unit from the first system, and returning the results to the second system from the third system. (Arnold, col.4, lines 22-25; col.5, lines 12-60; fig.2; Arnold teaches of launching specialized application for externally accessing the registered services)
